

In the Mûlamadhyamaka-kârîka, Nagarjuna, the great Buddhist philosopher, points to the ending of all views as Sunyata, emptiness, the ultimate reality:

The victorious ones have said
That emptiness is the relinquishing of all views.

For whomever emptiness is a view,
That one has accomplished nothing.

I prostrate to Gautama
Who through compassion
Taught the true doctrine,
Which leads to the relinquishing of
all views.

Jay Garfield, The Fundamental Wisdom of the Middle Way – Nagarjuna's Mûlamadhyamaka-kârîka, Oxford University Press, New York, 1995, XIII: 8, p. 354.