

Theosophical Society,
Adyar, Madras, S., India,
January 2, 1913.

My dear Fritz,

The Convention is over, but it is impossible to send any detailed account of it by the mail which is just leaving. I enclose a very brief description for your information, as it will probably be a week or two before a fuller account of it appears in the Adyar Bulletin or The Theosophist. I am also enclosing a report^{*} of the President's four lectures and her speech on the policy of the ^{Theosophical Society} ~~P. S.~~. Only an abstract of the first lecture is given, but it^{is} ^{is} one which she herself dictated; the other three are reported verbatim. They are atrociously printed, but this happens to be the easiest paper to obtain, which contains a full report, and I hope you will be able to make out the meaning. You will find the descriptive articles distinctly amusing! The four lectures will speedily appear in book form. We have had excellent weather, the temperature being down at 77°, with a strong breeze blowing.

With all heartiest good wishes, I am ever,

Yours most cordially,

C. W. Leadbeater.

Fletcher has been most useful during the Convention.

 Sent under separate cover, by book post, to the Editor of the American Theosophist.*

P.S. I think it would be well to print the President's statement on the policy of the Theosophical Society in the Sectional magazines when possible.
